ture books published by Doubleday, Doran and company (Subscription Books and Trade Departments), that the following information supplied by the publishers may be helpful.

The Nature library was originally published in 17 volumes, at $5 a volume, or $85 a set. When that edition was sold out a 10-volume edition, eliminating seven of the previous volumes, was published for $49.50. These volumes were declared out of print in 1926, when a 6-volume New nature library was brought out, containing the same text material as the Little nature library but bound in larger volumes and containing entirely different color plates. The 6-volume New nature library sold for $19.50.

The only set of nature books now being sold by Doubleday, Doran and company, Subscription Books Department, is the Little nature library, composed of the following titles: Birds, Wild flowers, Butterflies, Trees, Garden flowers, and Animals, which retails at $15 in cloth and $18 in three-quarters leather.

These same titles are being distributed by the Home and Book Service for $9.50. Comparing the volumes on birds, the original set contains 48 colored plates and the cheaper one 24 plates. The volume on butterflies in the original set has 32 plates and the new edition 24. The volumes on wild flowers and trees contain the same plates in both sets.

The titles are changed in the different editions, which adds to the confusion. One edition of this 6-volume set consists of volumes entitled Birds worth knowing, etc., and another the Book of birds, etc., and the trade edition of the bird volume published by Grosset is entitled Birds every child should know and is illustrated only with photo half-tones.

The original set of large volumes constituting the Nature library is being rebuilt, volume by volume. The Bird Book and the Butterfly Book are already issued with new color plates. The publishers intend to complete this set which will consist of about 10 volumes and will retail at about $50.00.
